MANY TAKEN BY HAND OF DEATH

Mrs. Josephine Suesserott Dies at Eagle Hotel. Deaths of well known Adams County People. Those who Survive.

MRS. BENJAMIN SUESSEROTT

Mrs. Maria Josephine Suesserott died at the Eagle Hotel at 8.15 Thursday evening after an illness of some months following an attack of apoplexy. She suffered a second attack on Thursday morning and death followed in the evening.

Mrs. Suesserott was born in Gettysburg in October 1833 and was accordingly 78 years old. She was a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Schmucker and the widow of Rev. Benjamin Suesserott, a Lutheran minister. After their marriage they lived for about fifteen years in Springfield, Illinois, where he was engaged in teaching. Later they spent several years in Lancaster where Rev. Mr. Suesserott was engaged in the ministry. After the death of her husband Mrs. Suesserott moved to Pasadena, California, where she lived for about twenty years, coming east about six years ago.

Mrs. Suesserott survived six children who grew to maturity while several children died in their childhood. She leaves three sisters, Mrs. Alice Neely and Mrs. Katharine Duncan, of Lincoln avenue, Gettysburg; and Mrs. Benjamin Sadler, of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held at half past seven this evening at the Eagle Hotel by the Rev. D. W. Woods. The body will be taken to Lancaster for interment, leaving Gettysburg at 8.42 Saturday morning.

JOSEPH A. HEAGY

Joseph A. Heagy died at his home in Hanover Thursday, aged 83 years and 8 months.

Mr. Heagy was born on a farm near Swartz's schoolhouse, Conowingo township, and lived there until last November, when he moved to Hanover. He was widely known in the lower end of Adams county. For many years he served as a school director and tax collector in Conowingo township, and was highly respected.

He is survived by a widow, six daughters and four sons—J. H. Heagy, Hanover; Mrs. Jacob Wentz, of near Christ church; Mrs. O. Arter, Berwick township; Mrs. James Harner, and Mrs. Wilson Study, of near Kingsdale; Mrs. Henry Keagy, of near McSherrytown; George W. Heagy, Midway; Jesse Springfield, Mass.; John, York; Miss Emma, at home. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Susanah Wolf, of Littlestown. Twenty four grandchildren and six great grandchildren survive.

Funeral Saturday, May 11, services at his late home at 9.30 a. m., Rev. A. M. Heilmann officiating. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery, Hanover.

MRS. SARAH MILHIMES

Mrs. Sarah Ann Milhimes, widow of the late Jesse Milhimes, died from infirmities at her home at Bollinger's Mill, Conowingo township, Wednesday, May 8th. She was aged 77 years, 6 months and 28 days.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Mummert, of Germany township, and four sons—John, of Littlestown; James, of near New Chester; Edward, of Mt. Pleasant; and Jesse Milhimes at home. Also, four brothers—John, Elijah and Benjamin Hoffman, of Adams county, and Daniel Hoffman, of Mansfield, Ohio. Twenty-five grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren also survive.

Funeral Friday, May 10, brief services at the house at 10.30 a. m.; further services and interment at Mt. Joy church.

MRS. EUGENE GREFF

Mrs. Eugene Greff died on Wednesday evening at her home in Bonneauville.

She leaves her husband, and two young daughters. She also leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strassbaugh, who moved to Bonneauville from Gettysburg recently, six sisters and one brother, all at home, Misses Lee, Ivy, Ruth, Edith, Catharine, and Margaret Strassbaugh and Raymond Strassbaugh.

Funeral from St. Joseph's church, Bonneauville, Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Interment at Bonneauville.

MOTHERS' MEETING

A mothers' meeting will be held by the W. C. T. U. in the Methodist church on Saturday afternoon, May 11, at 2.30. An interesting program has been arranged, and all the mothers of the town are invited. Because of the closeness to the annual Mothers' Day, there ought to be a large attendance of mothers at this meeting.

Bring the babies along. They will be taken care of and entertained by persons appointed for this work.

DANCING at the armory Saturday evening. Gentlemen 25, ladies 15.

WANT PERMANENT ASSEMBLY HERE

Movement on Foot to have Annual Gathering of Several Hundred People Select Gettysburg as Permanent Place.

Gettysburg is being urged as the permanent home for the Lutheran Summer Assembly, the sixth meeting of which will be held here this year on the mornings of the Chautauqua period. It is expected that between three hundred and four hundred ministers and laymen will be here in attendance on the sessions and to have it for an annual event would be a most fortunate thing for the town.

"Lutheran Church Work," the weekly official paper of the General Synod of the Lutheran church, this week contains several pages regarding the Chautauqua and the Summer Assembly. The following local people have contributed to the matter, Dr. W. A. Granville, Dr. F. C. Billheimer, Dr. H. C. Alleman, Wm. Arch McClean, George L. Kieffer, L. L. Taylor and C. S. Reaser. The articles are illustrated with battlefield views and make up a big advertisement for this year's event.

"That the Lutheran Summer Assembly has passed the experimental stage," Dr. Alleman says in this paper. "It is evident from the fact that it is about to move from the center of things and take up a permanent abode. From the beginning of the movement Gettysburg has been the logical location of the assembly. Gettysburg is our educational center and here at least our eastern summer assembly should be. The assembly idea naturally branches out into a summer school and a spiritual conference. The natural places for them are the college halls and the seminary chapel.

"And so it is to be this year—the beginning, we believe, of permanent institutions in these lines. It is essential to an assembly of this sort that it be comfortably housed, and that is now to be the case. The mornings are to be given up to conference and study; the seminary chapel affords morning shade with ample ventilation and comfortable chairs. For recreation hours its forty acres of campus, with its croquet grounds and tennis courts, its extensive walks and its shady groves, will afford all the opportunities necessary for the enjoyment of a large number of people."

Dr. Alleman completes his article by calling attention to the beauties of the battlefield and of this section of the country generally.

MISTAKE OF SPRAYING BLOOMS

Professor H. A. Surface, State Zoologist received at his office in Harrisburg, a letter from a doctor in Adams county, asking what his plants should be sprayed when in bloom. The reply was as follows:

"I hasten to reply to your recent letter concerning the spraying of plum, currant and gooseberry plants, as I fear from your letter that they should be sprayed while in bloom. This is a mistake. No plants of any kind should be sprayed while in bloom. Always spray either before the blossoms open or after they have fallen. If you spray while the plants are in bloom you are liable to damage the exposed, delicate floral organs, which are essential for fruit production, and also you are liable to kill the bees which are likewise necessary in carrying pollen or flower dust from one blossom to another thus insuring the setting of a crop."

DEMONSTRATIONS FOR NEXT WEEK

Adams County Orchards to be Visited by State Expert who will Give Spraying Demonstrations for Fruit Growers.

The annual spring series of public demonstrations in the model orchards under the supervision of the Division of Zoology is scheduled to begin next week in this section of this state. Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist of the State Department of Agriculture, announces the following dates and places of these public demonstrations to be held in Adams county:

May 16th—George Oyler, Gettysburg.
May 17th—D. A. Mickley, Cashtown.
May 18th—Daniel C. Jacobs, Gettysburg.

These public meetings are held for the purpose of teaching fruit growers the most approved methods of protecting their crop from such insect pests as codling moth, curculio, and the various fungous diseases to which fruit is subject. The dates of the demonstrations in each orchard are fixed on the basis of reports of the time of the opening of the blossoms, and the weather prevailing in each locality.

Since spraying must not be done while trees are in bloom, but should be performed during the four or five days subsequent to the falling of the petals, the time of spraying for the codling moth is exceedingly important, and efforts are being made to fix the dates for each meeting so as to correspond with these conditions.

FREE POULTRY BOOK

The Department of Agriculture has just issued a large bulletin, for free distribution to residents of Pennsylvania only. This bulletin covers all phases of poultry keeping is beautifully illustrated and bearing the stamp of the Department of Agriculture it can be depended upon to be authoritative and reliable. It is by W. Theo. Wittman a man well versed in poultry lore and thoroughly acquainted with poultry conditions not only in Pennsylvania but throughout the United States. As the edition of this bulletin is limited and the demand likely to be very large, those of our readers who may wish to have it had better write at once. Apply to Hon. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa., and ask for Bulletin No. 219.

HAVE SUBSCRIBED $9000

The committee having in charge the campaign to secure from the citizens of Gettysburg $25,000, toward the college endowment fund, announces to date subscriptions aggregating $9000—a very encouraging showing. This sum, it is believed, will be largely increased in the near future, as the greater portion of the canvass remains to be done.

PEACH TREES guaranteed to grow or price of any tree failing to grow refunded. Twenty leading varieties. Also apple trees in leading varieties. The Adams County Nursery, H. G. Baugher, proprietor, Bendersville Station, Aspers Postoffice.

BLAME ALIENS FOR MINE RIOT

Americans Not Involved in Minersville Fight.

THE SITUATION IS CRITICAL

More Trouble Expected When Attempt Is Made to Pump Water From the Mines.

Minersville, Pa., May 10.—A wave of indignation is sweeping across Schuylkill county as the result of a battle between the state troopers and the miners, which caused the death of one man, the fatal wounding of another and serious injuries to a third man and a woman, Mrs. George Woll.

Investigation has proved that the American miners had nothing to do with the trouble, and that the foreigners were alone responsible for it. The foreigners refuse to permit any man to go to the mines near the town to do "dead work," that is, to shore up the roofs of the passage ways with timber, to keep the fires going and to pump the water from the collieries.

Further trouble is imminent, for the law abiding citizens of Minersville will insist that "dead" workmen be allowed to keep the mines from filling with water. The foreigners are just as determined that no man leaves Minersville, and if both sides remain resolute there may be further bloodshed in the city.

American miners from the Lytle colliery, two miles from Minersville, decided to send enough men to the mines to work the pumps. The pumpmen volunteered to do all they could to keep the mine from flooding. Their fellow workmen told them to go to the mines, and that they and the state police would protect them from violence.

The foreigners were warned through an interpreter to remain away from the mine. Some of the miners have volunteered to keep the fires burning in case the firemen now on duty leave their posts.

An independent colliery several miles from Minersville is now filled with water, and it will take probably six months to pump it out, even if the convention to be held at Wilkes-Barre next Tuesday votes for the men to return to work. Consequently the miners will be compelled to remain idle for an indefinite period after the convention adjourns, no matter what the result may be.

The Pine Hill colliery is in danger of being flooded and two other collieries are filling with water, simply because pumpmen fear to run the gauntlet of the foreigners by doing the work which is absolutely necessary for their welfare.

R. K. Levan, chief Burgess of Minersville, the councilmen and others in authority believe that a way must be found for the pumpmen to work. They said that in addition to the damage which will result from floods to the mines and operators, the business men of Minersville will suffer, because continued idleness means loss of trade.

One colliery was recently repaired at a cost of $100,000. The water is now rising rapidly, and it is feared that unless pumpmen are obtained at once the money will have been spent for nothing.

The foreigners have no labor leader to caution them against their unreasonable attitude. The American miners cannot argue with them, for they will not listen to good advice, and as things stand now the English-speaking people of Minersville are more alarmed over the foreigners than they are of a strike.

Something must be done to save the mines, the authorities say. The only solution is for them to try to persuade pumpmen, "timbermen" and fire men to go to work.

34 KILLED BY EARTHQUAKE

Half of City of Zapotlan, in Mexico, Reported Destroyed.

Mexico City, Mex., May 10.—Thirty-four persons were killed and half of the city of Zapotlan, which is on the slope of Mount Colima, was destroyed by an earthquake.

Sixteen persons were killed in Ciudad Guzman and thirteen were seriously injured.

Twelve shocks were felt at Guadaluajara, while in Cuernavaca more than $500,000 damage was done, including the destruction of a church.

Following the shocks, the volcano Colima became active, throwing out lava, boulders and sand in its first eruption since it destroyed the city of Zapotlan in 1896.

The observatory in Mexico City predicts a disastrous earthquake in that city within twelve hours.

Four Girls Buried Alive.
 Green Bay Wis., May 10.—Four little girls, who lived on a farm near Black Creek, met death in a gravel pit. They were sent by their parents to bring home the cows. They stopped to play at the gravel pit and were caught by a cave-in.

Ketchel's Murderer Must Serve Term.
 Jefferson City, Mo., May 10.—Walter S. Dipey, convicted of the murder of Stanley Ketchel, the pugilist, must serve his life sentence, the supreme court held. (Goldie Smith, convicted as an accessory of Dipey, was freed, the court finding the evidence not sufficient to convict her.)

READY FOR MOTHERS' DAY

It Will Be More Widely Celebrated This Year Than Ever.

Philadelphia, May 10.—Miss Anna Jarvis, of 2031 North Twelfth street, the founder of Mothers' Day, has prepared a special program for organizations which desire to celebrate the day, May 12.

Miss Jarvis says the day will be more widely celebrated this year than ever before. A white carnation is the official flower, and every one is asked to wear it unless some other flower was the mother's favorite.

WANTS MARYLAND DELEGATES FOR T. R.

Governor Asks That Preferential Vote be Obeyed.

Baltimore, May 10.—Governor Phillips Lee Goldsborough, one of the leaders of the Republican party in Maryland, declared that he advocated sending a delegation to the national convention that would vote for Colonel Roosevelt as long as there was a chance of his receiving the nomination.

Governor Goldsborough said: "Colonel Roosevelt won the preferential vote in the primaries in this state last Monday, and the will of the people should prevail. I was on the Taft side and we lost."

"I advocate a delegation to the Republican national convention at Chicago that will carry out to the utmost degree the wishes expressed by the majority of Republicans at the polls and who will vote for Colonel Roosevelt for president as long as he has any possible chance of receiving the nomination. The personnel of these delegates to the national convention should properly be determined by the delegates in the state convention."

John B. Hanna, chairman of the Republican state central committee, who heard the governor make the above statement, said he endorsed the governor's views. Mr. Hanna supported President Taft in the primary campaign.

It is expected that Governor Goldsborough will head the Maryland delegation to Chicago.

FAINTS AT SIGHT OF GALLOWES

Mrs. Grace Collapsed When Shown "How It Worked."

Atlanta, Ga., May 10.—As a result of being shown how the gallows works Mrs. Grace Ulrich Ople Grace, under indictment for shooting her husband, was thrown into a faint in the Atlanta jail and is still in a hysterical condition.

Mrs. Grace was lonely and asked the jailer to show her over the prison. The well meaning official, trying to cheer her, took her to the gallows room. Here he exhibited the black cap and showed her how the noose is adjusted. For her benefit the trap was sprung and she was told how with the pulling of the big lever the condemned man's body falls six feet into space, bringing up with a jerk, which nine times out of ten breaks his neck.

As the jailer sprang the trap Mrs. Grace screamed "Oh, I can't stand it!" and fell in a faint. Physicians were called and revived her, but she is hysterical, claiming the picture of the gallows is fixed in her mind.

Boy Killed in Runaway Accident.
 Lebanon, Pa., May 10.—Stephen, the thirteen-year-old son of Stephen Michael, of this city, was killed in a runaway accident. He was driving a horse to its stable when the animal bolted and the boy, who had wound the lines around his neck, was dragged some distance before his brains were dashed out against a stone pile.

ADMITTS ORDERING EVIDENCE BURNED

Wire Man Tells of Destruction of Papers.

WERE RECORDS OF POOLS

Frank Baackes Declares He Supposed Government Was Through With Them.

New York, May 10.—Frank Baackes, vice president of the American Steel and Wire company, testifying at the hearing in the government's suit against the United States Steel corporation, took all the responsibility for the destruction of the papers connecting his company with the various wire pools.

It appeared from his testimony that the papers relating to some of these pools other than the horseshoe pool, and which were in the offices of the company in Chicago and New York, had been destroyed upon Mr. Baackes' order shortly after the pools dissolved in 1909, but that through the failure of some one to carry out his orders the papers in the Worcester office were not, and hence the government got hold of them at the time it began its prosecution a year ago. It was these papers which Mr. Baackes said that he had told his subordinates to destroy last fall because, he said, he supposed the government was through with them.

Apparently in an effort to prove that the destruction of these papers had some connection with the dissolution suit, the government tried hard to fix the time when they were destroyed as last October, but it appeared to have been done in November, and Mr. Baackes stoutly denied that it had anything to do with the present suit. From both Mr. Baackes and George A. Cragin, the assistant sales manager, who preceded Baackes on the stand, the government lawyers tried to get testimony showing that the officers of the steel corporation had knowledge of the pools in which its subsidiary was participating, but nothing came out to show this, the witnesses denying that Judge Gary or anybody else was aware of it.

Cragin, who was the first witness, said that he was the one who ordered the destruction of the papers to Harry A. Whitney, though the latter testified the day before that his orders had come directly from Baackes.

When Mr. Baackes took the stand, H. E. Colton, for the government, attempted to draw out of the witness the facts concerning the formation of the American Steel and Wire company. Baackes, however, denied that he had been present at discussions between John W. Gates, Judge Gary and others mentioned at that time. "I wasn't his enough," he said.

From Mr. Baackes Mr. Colton tried to get evidence then connecting the steel corporation with the wire pool and wanted to know if Mr. Gary did not drop into the meetings which the general sales managers of the subsidiaries had.

Mr. Baackes said he didn't, and anyway that the matter of the pools was not discussed at such meetings. He admitted that after withdrawing from the pool he had a talk with Lawyer Jackson, who had been the pool's supervisor, as to what future prices would be. The meetings that followed, he said in answer to Mr. Colton's questions, were for "general welfare" of those in the business and had nothing to do with the former pool.

KING DOWN IN SUBMARINE

George V. Has Novel Naval Experience.

Weymouth, Eng., May 10.—King George, who is here to see the Kings George toward the reorganization of the home fleet, as outlined by First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill, in introducing the navy estimates in parliament, has again taken up the life of a naval officer with remarkable satisfaction.

His majesty already has added one item to his experience in naval work by going down in a submarine. He spent ten minutes below the surface of the water in one of the latest "D" type of boats, which carries a disappearing gun, and expressed himself as delighted with the venture.

The aerial corps, which is continually maneuvering over the fleet, is hoping to carry the king as a passenger in an aeroplane.

Say Prisoner Hid Diamonds.
 Williamsport, Pa., May 10.—Arthur Dorman was arrested by the police at his house in this city. He is charged with the theft of a diamond ring worth $500. Secreted in an old stocking at Dorman's house, the police say they found nearly a hundred diamonds estimated to be worth $12,000. He will be asked to account for the presence of these stones in his house.

Cleared of Poisoning Husband.
 Pottsville, Pa., May 10.—Mrs. William Snyder, of Shenandoah, was cleared in court of the charge of poisoning her husband, a rich merchant the grand jury ignoring the bill. Snyder alleged that while his back was turned his wife put a deadly powder in the wine he was drinking. He drank it and became critically ill and only a powerful emetic saved his life.

FINE CHICKEN SALAD

SUBJECT THAT WILL MAKE WOMAN DUMB UNTIL SHE TASTES IT—Here is One That is Worth Trying.

New Combination Makes Most Talkative Woman Dumb Until She Tastes It—Here is One That is Worth Trying.

Women will turn eagerly from a magnificent display of spring millinery, from a bargain counter filled with real bargains, or leave a discussion on Browning unfinished to compare notes and tell their experiences with chicken salad. Before a new chicken salad combination the most talkative woman becomes dumb until it is served and then her tongue runs faster than ever.

Far be it from me to essay to give a recipe for a perfect salad, still I courageously offer the following and say that it suits many. Dice enough chicken meat to fill a pint cup, do not use the meat grinder for cutting the meat, it makes it too fine; use the kitchen scissors and have the dice of uniform size, when cut sprinkle with the juice of a lemon or with not too sharp vinegar, set aside while you prepare as much celery as you have chicken; the celery must be cut finer than the chicken and should be salted lightly and then mixed in with the cold meat. Stand these in the refrigerator to chill. Make a mayonnaise dressing or a boiled salad dressing and soften it with whipped cream, as a chicken salad must be mild and the taste of the chicken predominate.

The chicken and celery may be mixed with the mayonnaise and served on lettuce but a newer, prettier way is to sprinkle olive oil or salad oil over the mixture in the proportion of half as much oil as you have used vinegar, and heap the mixture in individual salad dishes with cress or lettuce beneath and then put in a heaping tablespoon of the stiff, rich looking dressing. A brilliant pimento or two or any other embellishment may be added. Onion is never used in chicken salad but sometimes the tiny spring onions are used as a garnish. Hard-boiled eggs have gone out of fashion for trimming salads and for this let us be truly thankful—Henrietta D. Grauel, Domestic Science Lecturer.

Remedy for Quick Temper.
 Nothing is so disastrous as losing one's temper. When you feel so towering, raging mad that you want to fight some one, take yourself by your collar or forelock and conduct yourself to a place of quiet seclusion. There endeavor to discover within your head some few grains of sound sense upon which to dwell long and thoughtfully. What's the good of losing one's temper? Lots of times you hand people undeserved rebukes, and then it is a tremendous nuisance trying to forget how unkind you have been.

Be patient. Be patient with the faults of others and be patient with your own. Take care of your health, your morals, and your spiritual self. Be above the sharp retort of the thoughtless.

Roiled Round Steak.
 Take a nice round steak (cut thin) and cut it into four pieces; pepper and salt both sides; chop a good sized onion very fine and spread over the pieces of steak; grate some hard bread and sprinkle liberally on top of onions. Now roll up each piece of steak so the onion and bread will be on the inside and tie securely with string so they will not unroll in cooking. Put a generous piece of lard in a deep iron frying pan and when it is smoking hot put in your meat rolls; brown them on all sides and then add enough hot water to cover. Boil slowly for one hour. Thicken the gravy with a little flour. Remove strings before serving.

The Distome and the Pearl.
 In the opinion of many experts pearls are the product of decay. The free pearls found in the common pearl-bearing mollusk are little tombs surrounding the bodies of the marine worms known as distomes.

In the month of August certain mollusks are found that have numerous small reddish-yellow points in the spot where pearls usually form. Then begins the imprisonment of the creature. In the first stages the surface of the distome is sprinkled with tiny grains of carbonate of lime. These granulations grow and take the form of crystals which end by forming a calcareous deposit around the creature's body.

Hints for the Farmer's Wife.
 To keep celery fresh wrap the stalks in a cloth, wet in cold water and place in a cold place on the ice.

Biting off the thread when sewing, which is a habit with many, scrapes the enamel from the teeth and exposes the nerve, causes suffering, a visit to the dentist and a heavy bill to pay.

To remove scratches on furniture rub with a cloth dipped in boiled linseed oil.
 Crisp celery served with cold meat is always appreciated and is a fine nerve tonic.

Pepper Salads.
 These individual appetizers may be stuffed with any salad mixture, white potatoes and mayonnaise, cucumber and tomatoes, or boiled slaw made of red cabbage seasoned with caraway seeds, sugar and vinegar. If the last is used it must be drained dry of liquid before it is put in the peppers. A little top is cut off these at the stem end, and after the filling is put in the top is put back and held securely with a bit of clean twine. The seeds and pith must be removed from the peppers of course or else they will be too hot to eat.

Turn From Tea to Rubber.
 The island of Ceylon has quit the wholesale production of tea and is turning rubber instead, because the latter is found to be more profitable.

MONEY IN ROADSIDE FRUIT

In Germany Trees Are Made to Help Pay the Upkeep of the Highways.

The auction sales of native fruit grown on the trees bordering the country roads, in the township of Linden, adjoining the city of Hanover, yield this autumn 20,612 marks ($4,906). Along certain stretches of these roads the yield has amounted to 1,500 marks (357) a kilometer, or at the rate of $355 a mile.

The province of Hanover has some 7,000 miles of country highways bordered with fruit trees, the profit of which is appropriated toward the upkeep of the roads. These roads, which are common place to the native resident, are the delight of the American tourist, who often wonders why roadside trees in the United States are not thus planted to fruit.

This application of the beautiful, practical and economic possibilities embraced in the control of such public property as roads is a fine illustration of the community thrift of the German. During the three weeks period of ripening sharp eyed old watchmen on bicycles patrol the roads, being particularly active on Sundays, when the people are out in large numbers.

It is forbidden to pick fruit from the ground, and to knock it from the trees is subject to a fine of 100 marks ($23.80) or more for each offense, says Consular and Trade Reports. Laws and regulations for the general good, however, excite such respect on the part of the German that cases of theft of fruit from the highway fruit trees rarely occur.

UNIQUE FENCE THAT BLOOMS

Cerrals in Mexico, Texas and New Mexico Inclosed by Cactus—Like Plant.

Throughout the older parts of Mexico, Texas and New Mexico many of the fences around the cerrals, and often the gardens, are made of "ocotilla." This is a cactus-like plant growing in a stalk form and often reaching a height of twenty or twenty-five feet. It is completely covered with long stout thorns.

The stalk is tough, hard to cut, almost impossible to break, and growing to the height it does it makes an effective protection. It is planted usually in three or four alternate rows and is held together by buckskin strings or with strong wire. It needs but little water.

I believe this ocotilla fence would be found very satisfactory to use on county estates, and even the owner of a modest plot of ground would find it a good thing. It prevents stock from breaking in, effectively keeps at a distance all marauders, and when in bloom is a beautiful sight, for at the tip of the stalk there comes early in summer a cluster of deep crimson, ball shaped blossoms. I remember once the astonished, almost horrified, expression of an Eastern woman to whom I mentioned the beauty of the cerral fence when in bloom—"Country Life in America."

More Light.

Fresh air enthusiasts are familiar enough to most of us, but we hear less of enthusiasm for light. Darkened parlors, darkened bedrooms, darkened sickrooms are too common. Sir B. W. Richardson, the eminent London scientist and physician, declared that when the professors of healing enter a sickroom their first words in most cases ought to be Goethe's dying exclamation: "More light! More light!" The light of the sun is God's own microbe killer, germicide, disinfectant, prophylactic, sickness healer. There is no physician, no chemical antidote, no compounded prescription to be compared with sunlight. Without it nature could not perform her functions. Man, beast, bird, insect would fall victims to the deadly gases that would prevail. The horrid mists and deadly gases are dispersed and decomposed by the action of light. Let it in, everywhere! Let the light in more and more abundantly. Faded carpets are not as pitiful as faded cheeks. Spoiled cushions are trivial compared with spoiled health. Darkened rooms are too suggestive of darkened lives.—The Christian Herald.

Was Too

Original

"Good evening," said the young man in fervent tones, as the young woman on whom he was calling entered the room. "I just thought that I'd drop in and ask you to marry me."

"I will not!" declared the young woman after she had caught her breath. "Why, Arthur Lewis! The idea! What do you mean by—"

"I thought so," said the young man, resignedly, sitting down and staring at the polish on his shoes. "There isn't a girl on earth who is mentally advanced enough to appreciate common sense or admire novelty. They all want the same thing in the same way at the same time! I suppose if I led you into a dim corner and held your hand and gazed into your eyes with an expression of deep emotion and adoring worship, and had said, 'Madeline, my heart's darling! Listen! I love you!' you would have fallen on my neck—"

"I don't understand you!" interrupted the young woman, breathing rapidly. "I don't understand you at all! I don't see why you should assume that I'm in the least anxious to marry you?"

"I don't," explained the young man. "I wouldn't be so rude and conceited. I merely assumed that you would marry me if I asked you—and I've asked you, and you say you won't."

"I must admit," went on the young man, "that I am both surprised and pained. I feel that you have been leading me on all this time just to amuse yourself, and I must say that I didn't think you were that kind."

"I don't think you are very nice," declared the young woman, "to come here and call me names and act as though I were to blame about something! I'm not in the habit of believing that every man who calls on me wants to marry me, and—"

"Now, Madeline!" interrupted the young man decisively. "that sounds very pretty and ladylike and no doubt you think it is so, but it isn't. In the bottom of your heart you know that when a man calls three times on a girl she begins sizing him up as a possible husband, and if she thinks he won't do, she gets rid of him. She has a headache when he calls, or she has another engagement when he asks her out, or she forgets appointments with him. You've not done a solitary one of these tricks! You've let me come and acted glad to see me—and you've ducked engagements with others to go places with me, and you've cooked indigestible things in the chafin dish at weird hours and urged them upon me, and otherwise given me to understand that you didn't exactly hate me. Naturally, from all this I deduced—"

"I don't understand you at all!" flared the young woman. "I think you are acting perfectly horrid, and you ought to apologize!"

"Oh, of course," said the young man. "I know if I had wanted to be dishonest with myself and you I could have wrung tears out of my eyes and murmured things about not being worthy and not daring to reach so far above me and called you an angel—but really, you know, it's six of one and half a dozen of the other, and we'd make a good married couple. However, you must admit, Madeline, that you get an edge on your temper occasionally—just as you have now, for instance. Still, I can handle that. You could do far worse than marry me. Do you love any one else?"

"Not!" said the young woman. "But that doesn't mean that I care two straws about such a conceited individual as yourself!"

"You should," he persisted. "You can't deny that you've been fond of me up to this moment. What's wrong all of a sudden?"

"You are!" she told him. "Totally!"

"Strange," murmured the young man. "Say, I bet what you're mad about is the way I did it—didn't it?"

"I never heard of such a proposal," she informed him. "You might have been offering to sell me a book or asking for a contribution to something! Any girl would say so!"

"Well," said the young man with a sigh, getting up. "It's too bad, and I'm awfully disappointed. I won't bother you any longer—"

"There's no need to hurry," said the young woman.

"What's the use of staying?" he asked, bitterly. "I've got a broken heart, and you don't love me, and—"

"I—I never said that," murmured the young woman. She looked away.

"It's just as I said," the young man told her two hours later when affairs were permanently settled. "Girls insist on all the artistic finish on these little affairs. I was too abrupt!"

JUDGE ARCHBALD MAY TAKE STAND

Accused Jurist to Testify in His Own Behalf.

Washington, May 10.—It was learned that Judge Robert W. Archbald, of the commerce court, probably will take the stand in his own defense before the house committee on judiciary prior to the closing of its investigation of the charges made against him that he used his position to obtain a favorable option on culm banks from officials of the Erie railroad.

The jurist will not be required to testify, but he has voluntarily appeared at the committee room with counsel and is understood to be awaiting an opportunity to answer the charges against him.

While the hearing has not progressed sufficiently to form any idea of whether or not impeachment proceedings should be brought, the impression about the committee room was that the "silent party" assignment and Williams' testimony would at least require a full explanation from Judge Archbald.

BLOW AT COMMERCE COURT

House by Majority of 120 to 49 Votes to Abolish It.

Washington, May 10.—The house voted, 120 to 49, to abolish the new commerce court.

About forty Republicans, including most of the Progressives, voted with the Democrats to put the new court off the judicial map.

The vote was taken in committee of the whole and is practically final for the house, although another fight may occur when the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill is up for final passage.

HAS THREE WIVES

Reading Man Under Arrest on Charge of Bigamy.

Reading, Pa., May 10.—Rand Kline, a railroad brakeman, was committed to jail in default of bail on the charge of bigamy, having, it is alleged, three wives.

Kline admitted the accusations and was a willing witness in telling of his marriages. William Kayser, a farmer, of Krumville, is the complainant, alleging that Kline was already married when his daughter, Miss Rosie Kayser, became his wife, in March, 1908, and that he has been married again since then.

At the hearing it was testified that Kline had married first fourteen years ago and that it is not known where this wife is at this time. In September, 1911, he is alleged to have married Miss Mary Wunderly, his third wife, with whom he lived until arrested.

How to Keep Your Thread.

The following plan is a most satisfactory one for keeping the various spools of thread which accumulate in a sewing machine dresser from getting into an almost hopeless mass of entanglement. Into a small board, which exactly fits the bottom of the drawer, drive at intervals of one and one-half inches two wire nails. Upon the projecting ends of these nails place the spools and they will remain stationary.

COMMONS PASS HOME RULE BILL

Goes Through by Vote of 372 to 271

THE DEBATE WAS LIVELY

Opposition Leader Assailed England's Policy in Ireland, While John Redmond Defended Measure.

London, May 10.—The home rule bill passed its second reading in the house of commons by a vote of 372 to 271.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, assailed the bill fiercely. The government, he declared, was setting up customs houses not to create a union, but to destroy the union which already existed. He denounced the safeguards in the bill as utterly futile, condemned the financial provisions and drew a gloomy picture of Ireland's future under home rule.

Every new parliament of inexperienced men, said the speaker, had tried to get the millennium in a hurry. The new Irish parliament would launch all sorts of schemes for improving the condition of the country, borrowing money for the purpose. As a result the imperial parliament would become liable for a huge capital sum it would not have sanctioned and for expenditures over which it had absolutely no control.

Referring to the example of South Africa, which had been cited to justify home rule in Ireland, Mr. Law said that in South Africa the two races wanted union, but that one or two races in Ireland, numbering a million, were bitterly opposed to home rule. He asked in such circumstances under what principle did the prime minister justify forcing the acceptance of the bill on Ulster.

In conclusion the Opposition leader declared that the government never could carry the bill through unless it was first submitted to the judgment of the country.

Mr. Redmond entered the fray with an assertion of the justice of his claim of Irishmen to manage their own affairs, which was now generally conceded. Ireland, he thought, had reason to be well satisfied with the course of the debate.

The critics of the bill had built their arguments on the remarkable proposition that, having obtained a great charter of liberty, the Irish would prove themselves a nation of fools and would immediately set to work to wreck and ruin their own constitution. Such malicious folly had never been committed by any other section of the empire to which home rule had been granted, so why should it be attributed to Ireland?

The moment home rule was granted, continued Mr. Redmond, it would become the highest interest of the Irish nation to safeguard the constitution, to utilize it in moderation, to cultivate the most friendly relations with Great Britain, and, for the first time in her history, to do all in her power to promote the unity, the prosperity and the welfare of the empire.

Mr. Redmond said the Nationalists accepted the bill as a final settlement of the international quarrel between England and Ireland, and when saying this he spoke not only for Irishmen in Ireland, but for those in the United States, Canada, New Zealand and in Australia.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP

The Next Qualifying Examination Will Be Held in October.

Philadelphia, May 10.—Provost Edgar F. Smith, chairman for the state of Pennsylvania, announced that the next qualifying examination for the Rhodes scholarship will be held in October, 1912, the selection of scholars will be completed before the end of January, 1913, and the elected scholars will begin residence at Oxford in October of the same year.

It should be clearly understood that the examination is not competitive, but qualifying, and is merely intended to give assurance that every elected scholar is up to the standard of the first examination which the University of Oxford demands of all candidates for the B. A. degree.

The scholarship is valued at $1500 a year and is tenable for a term of three years.

A candidate must be a citizen of the United States, with at least five years' domicile, and be unmarried. By the 1st of October of the year for which he is elected he must have passed his nineteenth and not have passed his twenty-fifth birthday.

Five Killed in Explosion.

Cleveland, O., May 10.—By an explosion in the blast furnace of the American Steel and Wire company five men were killed, eight probably fatally hurt and four more were seriously injured. At the time of the explosion the men were inside one of the furnaces taking out a blow pipe as the furnace was to have been shut down. It is believed that accumulated gas was ignited by a torch carried by one of the men.

Kills Man After Joke.

Montgomery, Ala., May 10.—A Jest at his expense is said to have prompted the killing by Alto Griffin of Max Davis, at Union Springs, Ala. Griffin was brought here because of the high feeling in Union Springs.

Mixing Cake.

Always beat the butter and sugar to a cream with the hands, then add a little of the flour before you add the milk; then the milk, then the rest of the flour and baking powder, and last the beaten eggs. This rule applies to all cakes with butter in.

After putting cake in pans lift the pans up by the side and let drop down on the table. This causes the air to rise and prevents cake from falling.

CLEAR WEATHER AIDS FLOOD RELIEF

Work on the Levee is Nearly Completed.

New Orleans, May 10.—More sunshine and three days' absence of rain in the lower Mississippi valley have served to bring about a marked improvement in the flood conditions.

The levees in the New Orleans district have been thoroughly dried out and practically no work is being done in this section except along a short stretch on the west side of the river.

Reports received at the army engineers' headquarters from points both above and below New Orleans were optimistic. A few weak spots above New Orleans are being strengthened.

In the Pointe Coupee district and at intervals as far south as Donaldsonville, 4000 federal levee workers and a still larger number of state convicts and citizen volunteers are continuing their efforts to strengthen the levees to a point where an even higher stage of water would not be feared.

By tearing away 1400 feet of the south end of the Tensas crevasse a wall of water from eight to ten feet deep and half a mile in width is bearing down upon the already overflowed area of Pointe Coupee, St. Landry and several other parishes to complete a work of ruin.

Looters in skirts are reported to be reaping a rich harvest in the inundated country. Many houses from which their occupants were hastily driven have been broken open and robbed.

RAT ATTACKS A CHILD

Little John Flynn's Thumb Almost Bitten Off While He Slept.

Riverhead, L. I., May 10.—John Flynn, Jr., three and a half years old, was badly bitten by a rat at his parents' home.

The child was heard to cry out several times while the family was downstairs and asleep in his crib on the second floor. Each time there was an investigation and he appeared to be sleeping quietly.

Finally the child screamed in agony and his mother, running up, was in time to see a rat, which she asserts was almost as big as a cat, leap from the crib.

The child was sitting up and the blood was spurting from the lacerated thumb, which was almost bitten off. After the lad had been taken down stairs and the wound dressed Mr. Flynn went up the stairs quietly to get a shot at the rat, which he found smelling around the blood spots in the crib. He watched several hours, but without success.

The Prodigal Judge

CHAPTER XXX.

The Judge Receives a Letter.

After he had parted with Solomon Mahaffy the judge applied himself diligently to shaping that miracle-working document which he was preparing as an offset to whatever risk he ran in meeting Fentress. As sanguine as he was sanguinary he confidently expected to survive the encounter, yet it was well to provide for a possible emergency—had he not his grandson's future to consider? While thus occupied he saw the afternoon stage arrive and depart from before the City Tavern.

Half an hour later Mr. Wesley, the postmaster, came sauntering up the street. In his hand he carried a letter.

"Howdy," he drawled, from just beyond the judge's open door.

The judge glanced up, his quill pen poised aloft.

"Good evening, sir; won't you step inside and be seated?" he asked graciously. His dealings with the United States mail service were of the most insignificant description, and in personally delivering a letter, if this was what had brought him there, he felt Mr. Wesley had reached the limit of official courtesy and despatch.

"Well, sir; it looks like you'd never told us more than two-thirds of the truth!" said the postmaster. He surveyed the judge curiously.

"I am complimented by your opinion of my veracity," responded that gentleman promptly. "I consider two-thirds an enormously high per cent. to have achieved."

"There is something in that, too," agreed Mr. Wesley. "Who is Colonel Slocum Price Turberville?"

The judge started up from his chair.

"I have that honor," said he, bowing.

"Well, here's a letter come in addressed like that, and as you've been using part of the name I am willing to assume you're legally entitled to the rest of it. It clears up a point that off and on has troubled me considerably. I can only wonder I wasn't smarter."

"What point, may I ask?"

"Why, about the time you hung out your shingle here, some one wrote a letter to General Jackson. It was mailed after night, and when I seen it in the morning I was clean beat. I couldn't locate the handwriting, and yet I kept that letter back a couple of days and give it all my spare time. It ain't that I'm one of your spying sort—there's nothing of the Yankee about me!"

"Certainly not," agreed the judge.

"Candidly, judge, I reckon you wrote that letter, seeing this one comes under a frank from Washington. No, sir—I couldn't make out who was corresponding with the president, and it worried me, not knowing, more than anything I've had to contend against since I came into office. I calculate there ain't a postmaster in the United States takes a more personal interest in the service than me. I've frequently set patrons right when they was in doubt as to the date they had mailed such and such a letter." As Mr. Wesley sometimes canceled as many as three or four stamps in a single day he might have been pardoned his pride in a brain which thus lightly dealt with the burden of official business. He surrendered the letter with marked reluctance.

"Your surmise is correct," said the judge with dignity. "I had occasion to write my friend, General Jackson, and unless I am greatly mistaken I have my answer here." And with a fine air of indifference he tossed the letter on the table.

"And do you know Old Hickory?" cried Mr. Wesley.

"Why not? Does it surprise you?" inquired the judge. It was only his innate courtesy which restrained him from kicking the postmaster into the street, so intense was his desire to be rid of him.

"No, I don't know as it does, judge. Naturally a public man like him is in the way of meeting with all sorts. A politician can't afford to be too blame particular. Well, next time you write you might just send him my regards—G. W. M. de L. Wesley's regards—there was considerable contention over my getting this office; I reckon he ain't forgot. There was speeches made, I understand the lie was passed between two United States senators, and that a quid of tobacco was thrown in anger." Having thus clearly established the fact that he was a more or less national character, Mr. Wesley took himself off.

When he had disappeared from sight down the street, the judge closed the door. Then he picked up the letter. For a long minute he held it in his hand, uncertain, fearful, while his mind slipped back into the past until his inward searching vision ferreted out a handsome soldierly figure—his own.

"That's what Jackson remembers if he remembers anything!" he muttered, as with trembling fingers he broke the seal. Almost instantly a smile overspread his battered features. He hitched his chin higher and squared his ponderous shoulders. "I am not forgotten—no, damn it—no!" he exulted under his breath. "Recalls me with sincere esteem and considers my services to the country as well worthy of recognition—" the judge breathed deep. What would Mahaffy find to say now? Certainly this was well calculated to disturb the sour cynicism of his friend. His bleared eyes brimmed. After all his groping he had touched hands with the realities at last! Even a federal judgeship, though not an office of first repute in the south, had its dignity—it signified something! He would make Solomon his clerk! The judge reached for his hat. Mahaffy must know at once that fortune had mended for them. Why, at that moment he was actually in receipt of an income!

He sat down, the better to enjoy the unique sensation. Taxes were being levied and collected with no other end in view than his stipend—his ardent fancy saw the whole machinery of government in operation for his benefit. It was a singular feeling he experienced. Then promptly his spendthrift brain became active. He needed clothes—so did Mahaffy—so did his grandson; they must take a larger house; he would buy himself a man servant; these were pressing necessities as he now viewed them.

Once again he reached for his hat; the desire to rush off to Belle Plain was overmastering.

"I reckon I'd be justified in hiring a conveyance from Pegloe," he thought, but just here he had a saving memory of his unfinished task; that claimed precedence and he resumed his pen.

An hour later Pegloe's black boy presented himself to the judge. He came bearing a gift, and the gift appropriately enough was a square case bottle of respectable size. The judge was greatly touched by this attention, but he began by making a most temperate use of the tavern-keeper's offering; then as the formidable document he was preparing took shape under his hand he more and more lost that feeling of Spartan fortitude which had at first sustained him in the presence of temptation. He wrote and slipped in complete and quiet luxury, and when at last he had exhausted the contents of the bottle it occurred to him that it would be no properly personal to convey his thanks to Pegloe. Perhaps he was not uninspired in this by ulterior hopes; if so, they were richly rewarded. The resources of the City Tavern were suddenly placed at his disposal. He attributed this to a variety of causes all good and sufficient, but the real reason never suggested itself; indeed it was of such a perfidious nature that the judge, open and generous-minded, could not have grasped it.

By six o'clock he was undeniably drunk; at eight he was sounding still deeper depths of inebriety, with only the most confused memory of impending events; at ten he collapsed and was borne upstairs by Pegloe and his black boy to a remote chamber in the kitchen wing. Here he was undressed and put to bed, and the tavern-keeper, making a bundle of his clothes, retired from the room, locking the door after him, and the judge was doubly a prisoner.

Rousing at last from a heavy, dreamless sleep the judge was aware of a faint impalpable light in his room, the ashen light of a dull October dawn. He was aware, too, of a feeling of profound depression. He knew this was the aftermath of indulgence and that he might look forward to forty-eight hours of utter misery of soul, and, groaning aloud, he closed his eyes. Sleep was the thing if he could compass it. Instead, his memory quickened. Something was to happen at sun-up—he could not recall what it was to be, though he distinctly remembered that Mahaffy had spoken of this very matter—Mahaffy, the austere and implacable, the disembodied conscience whose fealty to duty had somehow survived his own spiritual ruin, so that he had become a sort of moral sign-post, ever pointing the way yet never going it himself.

The judge lay still and thought deeply as the light intensified itself.

Pegloe's Black Boy Came Bearing a Gift.

What was it that Mahaffy had said he was to do at sun-up? The very hour accented his suspicions. Probably it was no more than some cheerless obligation to be met, or Mahaffy would not have been so concerned about it. Eventually he decided to refer everything to Mahaffy. He spoke his friend's name weakly and in a shaking voice, but received no answer.

"Solomon!" he repeated, and shifting his position, looked in what should have been the direction of the shake-down bed his friend occupied. Neither the bed nor Mahaffy were there. The judge gasped—he wondered if this were not a premonition of certain hallucinations to which he was not a stranger. Then all in a flash he remembered Fentress and the meeting at Boggs', something of how the evening had been spent, and a spasm of regret shook him.

"I had other things to think of. He told me never happen again!" he told himself remorsefully.

He was wide-awake now. Doubtless Pegloe had put him to bed. Well, that had been thoughtful of Pegloe—he would not forget him—the City Tavern should continue to enjoy his patronage. It would be something for Pegloe to boast of that Judge Slocum Price Turberville always made his place headquarters when in Raleigh. Feeling that he had already conferred wealth and distinction on the fortunate Pegloe the judge thrust his feet over the side of his bed and stood erect. Stooping he reached for his clothes. He confidently expected to find them on the floor, but his hand merely swept an uncarpeted waste. The judge was profoundly astonished.

"Maybe I've got 'em on. I don't recall taking them off!" he thought hopefully. He moved uncertainly in the direction of the window, where the light showed him his own bare extremities. He reverted to his original idea that his clothes were scattered about the floor.

He was beginning to experience a great sense of haste; it was two miles to Boggs' and Fentress would be there at sun-up. Finally he abandoned his quest of the missing garments and turned to the door. To say that he was amazed when he found it locked would have most inadequately described his emotions. Breathing deep, he fell back a step or two, and then with all the vigor he could muster launched himself at the door. But it resisted him.

"It's bolted on the other side!" he muttered, the full measure of Pegloe's perfidy revealing itself to his mind. He was agast. It was a plot to discredit him. Pegloe's hospitality had been inspired by his enemy, for Pegloe was Fentress' tenant.

Again he attacked the door; he believed it might be possible to force it from its hinges, but Pegloe had done his work too well for that, and at last, spent and breathless, the judge dropped down on the edge of his bed to consider the situation. He was without clothes and he was a prisoner, yet his mind rose speedily to meet the difficulties that beset him. His greatest activities were reserved for what appeared to be only a season of despair. He armed himself with a three-legged stool he had found and turned once more to the door, but the stout planks stood firm under his blows.

"Unless I get out of here in time I'm a ruined man!" thought the judge. "After this Fentress will refuse to meet me!"

The window next engaged his attention. That, too, Pegloe had taken the precaution to fasten, but a single savage blow of the stool shattered glass and sash and left an empty space that framed the dawn's red glow. The judge looked out and shook his head dubiously. It was twelve feet or more to the ground, a risky drop for a gentleman of his years and build. The judge considered making a rope of his bedding and lowering himself to the ground by means of it; he remembered to have read of captives in that interesting French prison, the Bastille, who did this. However, an equally ingenious but much more simple use for his bedding occurred to him; it would form a soft and yielding substance on which to alight. He gathered it up into his arms, feather-tick and all, and pushed it through the window, then he wriggled out across the ledge, feet first, and lowering himself to the full length of his arms, dropped.

He landed squarely on the rolled-up bed with a jar that shook him to his center. Almost gaily he snatched up a quilt, draping it about him after the manner of a Roman toga, and thus lightly habited, started across Mr. Pegloe's truck-patch, his one thought Boggs' and the sun. It would have served no purpose to have gone home, since his entire wardrobe, except for the shirt on his back, was in the tavern-keeper's possession, besides he had not a moment to lose, for the sun was peeping at him over the horizon.

Unobserved he gained the edge of the town and the highroad that led past Boggs' and stole a fearful glance over his shoulder. The sun was clear of the treetops, he could even feel the lifeless dust grow warm beneath his feet; and wrapping the quilt closer about him he broke into a labored run.

Some twenty minutes later Boggs' came in sight. He experienced a moment of doubt—doubtless Fentress had been there and gone! It was a hideous thought and the judge groaned. Then at the other end of the meadow near the woods he distinguished several men, Fentress and his friends beyond question. The judge laughed aloud. In spite of everything he was keeping his engagement, he was plucking his triumph out of the very dregs of failure. The judge threw himself over the fence, a corner of the quilt caught on one of the rails; he turned to release it, and in that instant two pistol shots rang out sharply in the morning air.

MEDICAL ADVERTISING

WHEN WOMEN ARE PALE
Health Glow Better than Rouge.
Women who are pale and feel compelled to resort to cosmetics to give their complexion a "natural" color will be pleased to know a better way. Pallor is caused by poor, thin blood—nothing else. If your blood is as rich and red as it ought to be, the skin will have that ruddy hue of health so much desired.

Miss Clara Wehlers of Brooklyn, says "My blood became thin and poor last spring, making me pale and nervous. I had heard that Vinol was a splendid thing for this condition so I began using it and received great benefit. It has restored my healthy color and made me feel well again. Vinol is an excellent tonic."

We say positively that there is nothing like Vinol to enrich and purify the blood, and build up weak, run-down people. The taste is delicious and even children like to take it.

You can use Vinol without any risk for we guarantee it to be satisfactory and pay back your money if it is not. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.
